25-second spot

Children from five to ten years old are invited to The Evergreen State College Saturday (December 13) for a "Children's Festival." For $2 each, children can enjoy Native American dancers and story tellers, see live performances by a Seattle children's theater troupe, and view a Walt Disney film classic. The festival begins at 10 a.m. and runs through til 5 p.m. --- plenty of time for parents to Christmas shop --- alone. That's December 13 --- Children's Festival --- The Evergreen State College.

30-second spot

If you've still got Christmas shopping left to do and don't know what to do with your youngsters, The Evergreen State College may have the answer for you. Saturday, December 13, the college is offering a benefit "Children's Festival" --- complete with a Walt Disney movie and live performances by both Native American dancers and a Seattle children's theater group. The festival runs from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and is especially designed for children five to ten years old.

Proceeds from the $2 admission fee goes toward bringing lecturers and entertainers to the college for public enjoyment.
