Fourteen representatives from communications media, art museums, colleges and universities will attend an all day Job and Graduate School Information Day at The Evergreen State College April 14.

Gail Martin, Evergreen coordinator of Career Planning and Placement, said the event is designed to introduce Evergreen seniors to professionals in the fields of art and communications. Students will have a chance to discuss job markets, job requirements, resumes, job search strategies, and graduate school exploration with the professional representatives.

Planning to participate in the day long meeting, which begins at 9 a.m., are Burnill Clark, director of programming and operations for KCTS television; Ken Ritchey, director, KOMO television; Bob MacLeod, news director, KGY radio; Denny Fleenor, news director, KZAM radio; John Kaufman, director of the Red Earth Performing Company; Andrew Witt, general manager of the American Contemporary Theatre in Seattle; Rosemary Hauge, director of Public Services for the Portland Center for Visual Arts.

Polly Eyerly, curator of Education at the Portland Art Museum; Dr. Tom Savage, chairman of the education department at Whitworth College; John Agars, associate professor of art at Central Washington State College; Dean Katz, newsman for Associated Press; James Haseltine, director of Washington State Arts Commission; Keith Stamm, associate professor of communications at the University of Washington; and David Foster, professor of fine and applied arts at the University of Oregon.
