Dr. John O. Aiken, regional computing coordinator for the Office of Computer Services at Cornell University, has been named director of computer services at The Evergreen State College. The appointment, announced by Evergreen Vice President and Provost Edward J. Kormondy, is effective March 15.

In his new post, Dr. Aiken will be responsible for planning, developing, directing and coordinating computer services for instructional, research and administrative activities at Evergreen, according to Dr. Kormondy. Dr. Aiken will also serve as the college's representative on interinstitutional groups concerned with computer networking and time sharing.

Dr. Aiken has served in his present post at Cornell for the past two years. He formerly held positions as manager of interactive computing at Cornell and as a research associate at Brown University. He has also been an instructor of statistics at Roger Williams College in Rhode Island and as a statistical and data processing consultant to New England Public Opinion Research Corporation.

A native of Lincoln, Nebraska, Dr. Aiken earned his bachelor of arts degree in physics from Reed College, and both his master's degree and doctorate in mathematical psychology from Brown University.
