Greg Steinke, a member of The Evergreen State College faculty, has been commissioned by the Thalia Conservatory in Seattle to compose a new piece for violin, cello and chamber orchestra.

Steinke, who joined the Evergreen faculty last Fall, was formerly an assistant professor of music at California State University at Northridge. He has composed more than two dozen pieces and is an accomplished oboe recitalist. He currently co-directs the Evergreen Muse and is teaching in A.R.T.S. Coordinated Studies Program, which offers a combined study of music, dance and theater.
