A sale of Indian arts and crafts will be staged by students in The Evergreen State College Native American Art Experience program April 9 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Lacey Community Center (1047 Willow Street).

Evergreen Faculty Member Mary Nelson says the sale will feature the works of 17 students in her academic program who are trying to raise funds for their month-long stay in K'San-Hazelton, British Columbia next month.

"We've spent all of Winter Quarter studying the culture and history of Native peoples in this area," she says. "Now we just need to raise enough money to cover our housing costs."

Students will explore the art and cultures of British Columbia Native Americans during their sojourn, which will also take them to old villages and afford them an opportunity to talk to many village elders.
