Cecil E. Flory, a motion picture and television production manager for The Boeing Company in Seattle, has been appointed to coordinate, direct, and produce training materials for an interagency contract between The Evergreen State College and the Washington Department of Social and Health Services.

Flory, who assumed his new position August 7, will direct development of audio-visual training materials and services for the state agency. He also will coordinate and direct Evergreen's library media production unit, according to David Carnahan, the college's associate dean of library services and director of the interagency project.

Under terms of the contract, Evergreen provides the agency with audio-visual training materials, services, and work space. The college retains title to special media equipment purchased as part of the agreement.

A graduate of the University of Washington, Flory has served as an operations manager and production manager for two Seattle-area television stations and has worked as a movie and television producer/director for the U.S. Information Agency in Washington, D.C. He joined Boeing as chief of the Photo Media Production Unit in 1966 and was named manager of the Motion Picture and Television Production Unit in 1970.

He is married and is the father of four children.
