The deadline for submission of entries to The Evergreen State College three-dimensional design competition has been extended to September 25, according to Doug Barnes, student chairman of the Evergreen Visual Environment Board.

College officials hope the contest, sponsored jointly by Evergreen and the Washington State Arts Commission, will result in installation of a completed sculpture on campus by January 15.

Notification of the final design award will be made by October 15, Barnes said. The selected sculpture will be "designed specifically to enhance the campus and the entire Evergreen community."

Artists will be required to construct the artwork on campus with the assistance of students, staff and volunteers, and must be willing to have the process of construction videotaped for Evergreen's archives.

All design models will be on display in the Evergreen library between September 28 and October 20. Construction should begin by October 15.
