A first-hand study of family life in Polynesia will be presented by faculty member Eric Larson in the final Fall Quarter Lecture Series program at The Evergreen State College. Larson's presentation will start at eight p.m. in Lecture Hall One.

Larson, an anthropologist, spent a year on a remote south Pacific Island studying the culture and every-day life of the Polynesians while he completed research for his doctorate from the University of Oregon.

His presentation is free and the public is invited.
