Two faculty members at The Evergreen State College have been selected by the Lilly Foundation to attend a summer workshop on Illuminative Evaluation.

Dr. Lowell Kuehn and Dr. Virginia Ingersoll are among 28 college professors from throughout the nation chosen to attend a two-week workshop August 3-17 in Colorado Springs.

The intensive workshop, directed by Professor Malcolm Parlett of the Nuffield Foundation in London, England, will seek to "raise the level of institutional sophistication about program evaluation by helping faculty learn how evaluation can be effective and how it can help institutions shape the right questions and marshal the relevant evidence." The intensive summer session will be followed by a second workshop next winter.
