Richard Tessandore, a former swim coach and assistant manager of the Tumwater Valley Pool, has been named supervisor of The Evergreen State College Recreation Center. The appointment, effective September 4, was announced by Pete Steilberg, Evergreen's Director of Recreation and Campus Activities.

Tessandore's primary responsibilities involve supervision and training of 38 student recreation assistants, including college life guards. He also will assist Ed King, Evergreen's Associate Director of Recreational Campus Activities.

Tessandore, 27, has worked as a life guard and first aid instructor at Evergreen since January. He worked for Tumwater Valley Pool from 1970-71 as assistant manager and head instructor, and served as a special services aquatics supervisor in the U.S. Army for two years.

A graduate of Moclips, Washington High School, Tessandore has attended Centralia College, Olympia Vocational-Technical Institute, and Evergreen. He has received Emergency Medical Training, is a certified scuba diver, and holds the Red Cross Water Safety Instructor's card.
