...EVERGREENER WALKING THE BEATS WITH OPD...Harvey Roberts, a second-year Tacoma student at Evergreen, started his college career with the goal of playing the blues as a radio disk jockey. Instead, he's wearing the blues of the Olympia Police Department 40 hours a week as OPD's first full-time student intern. Working closely with Police Lt. Bill Remsen and Evergreen Security Supervisor Rod Marrom, Roberts said he is gaining "a practical, realistic view of police work." Excited about his experiences, Roberts said he is most impressed with the feeling that "you're not just doing a job of enforcing the law...but you're doing something that is really meaningful and worthwhile."

Lt. Remsen reports that the officers have readily accepted Roberts and "enjoy having him working with them." The internship is sponsored through Evergreen's Office of Cooperative Education and is supplemented with "lots of book work," according to the young Tacoman who hopes to become a policeman following his graduation in June of 1974.

...100 MILE HIKE IS JUST THE BEGINNING...The first 100 miles will be the easy part of an adventure for three Evergreen students and an Olympia roofer who plan a Spring Quarter assault on the 19,850 heights of Canada's Mt. Logan. Students Tim Gregg, Brian Woods and Peter Hohn, and roofer Jack Lewis of Olympia, will leave Mar. 27 to begin a 100 mile trek to the assault point in the Mt. Elais mountains of the Yukon Territory. The young climbers hope to pioneer a route up the mountain's east ridge during their nine-week expedition.
