EVERGREENERS HARVEST TIMBERS FOR THE NEEDY

A "huge army of ants" converged on the site of the Communications Laboratory Building last Sunday and harvested nearly a dozen cords of wood for distribution to needy families in the Olympia area. Faculty Member Bill Aldridge, who organized the crew of Evergreen lumberjacks, said it was "one of the most satisfying days I've ever had."

Some 40 students, faculty and staff offered their muscles throughout the day to cut, stack and deliver the timbers, which were saved after land for the new building was cleared this summer.

"Chain saws were howling, axes were chopping, and wedges were being driven all day long," Aldridge said. "And, this whole crew of workers kept up a steady stream of lumber..." from stacks on the ground to pickups, and to the homes of six families identified as "needy" by the Department of Social and Health Services.

Aldridge said the crew harvested "all the wood that we could get at," Sunday. He added, "there was quite a bit of cedar and fir timber stacked along with the firewood (alder and maple). Once the cedar and fir has been delivered to the Organic Farm (for construction of an additional building), we'll have another work day to clean up the rest of the firewood and get it delivered."

Idea for salvaging the cleared timbers, which are usually burned before construction begins, came from Aldridge last Spring. "I felt sure there were a number of families in this area who could use the firewood this winter," he said. "I'm just really pleased that we were able to save it for distribution."

Working with Aldridge on the humanitarian effort have been Faculty Member Earle McNeil, Architect Bill Knauss and Director of Facilities Jerry Schillinger.

BURGER RESIGNS AS EDITOR; HIRSHMAN TO TAKE OVER CPJ

Knute Olsson (Skip) Burger resigned Oct. 9 as editor of the Cooper Point Journal. Citing "personal reasons" for his resignation, Burger, a third-year Evergreener from Seattle, said he was leaving the editorship in the capable hands of Bill Hirshman, who has served as managing editor of the paper Fall Quarter.

Burger will continue on the CPJ staff as an associate editor. The Lakeside High School graduate said he'll be devoting more time to his academic work in the "Communications Inside/Outside" program the rest of the quarter.

Hirshman, a junior from Philadelphia, served as news editor of the CPJ last Spring and as news director for KAOS radio. His position as managing editor will be filled by Nick Allison, a freshman from Seattle.

Official appointment of a new editor will be made by the Publications Board at its next meeting scheduled for later this month.

CO-OP REPORTS 30% INCREASE IN PAID INTERNSHIPS

The Office of Cooperative Education reports a ten percent increase in the number of internships completed during the 1973-74 academic year compared to the previous year. Director of Cooperative Education Ken Donohue says 574 students completed internships last year compared to 524 interns during the 1972-73 academic year.

Donohue also reports that the number of paid internships increased by more than 30 percent over the last 12 months. "During the 1972-73 academic year we reported a total of 140 paid internships, which provided $190,000 in stipends," he says. "In this past academic year, we had 183 paid internships providing $244,296 in stipends."

Nearly 900 students requested internships during the 1973-74 academic year, and 558 agencies --- including social service, educational, governmental and business organizations --- agreed to participate in the Co-op program.

Intern assignments during Summer Quarter (1974) included 72 full-time and 46 part-time placements, with 56 paid internships, which paid a total of $54,968. Donohue said more than 800 internships were available at the beginning of Fall Quarter.

SIX ASKED TO SERVE ON PUBLICATIONS BOARD

UNITED WAY DRIVE IN FULL SWING

Twenty-one agencies --- from Boy Scouts to Morningside, Salvation Army to Crisis Clinic, Alcoholism Recovery Council to Children's Home Society --- are once again asking for help. Funded through the United Way of Thurston County, the agencies are working together in a "People Helping People" effort to raise funds through one annual gift-giving campaign.

Director of Cooperative Education Ken Donohue has been named chairman of the Evergreen United Way drive and is asking all members of the Evergreen staff and faculty to "give their fair share" to the fund raising campaign. Pledge cards and complete information about all of the agencies funded through United Way are available in the Co-op Office, Laboratory Building room 1000.

Last year Evergreenes gave more than $3,000 to the county-wide drive. Donohue hopes at least that amount can be raised again this fall. Stop by his office if you need a little persuasion. If you don't, then drop your pledge card in campus mail today!

VICE PRESIDENTS CALL FOR ENVIRONMENTAL IMPACT DTF

Vice Presidents Dean Clabaugh and Ed Kormondy this week called for creation of a Disappearing Task Force to "review, modify, expand upon and finally recommend" minimum procedural steps for preparation of Environmental Impact statements.

In a memo issued Oct. 4, Clabaugh and Kormondy named Faculty Member Richard Cellarius chairman of the DTF and asked seven other staff and faculty members to work with him "together with such other staff and faculty members and students as may be helpful and represent a proper community cross section." Working with Cellarius will be Director of Facilities Jerry Schillinger, Faculty Members Steve Herman, Oscar Soule, Pete Taylor, Craig Carlson, and Al Wiedemann, and Architect Bill Knauss.

DTF members will assist in advising Facilities staff members on preparation of first draft Environmental Impact Statements and will help them review and recommend EIS changes before the documents are sent off campus. The DTF is also charged with reviewing and considering possible changes to the campus master plan.

The DTF was promoted, in part, by an earlier recommendation from Cellarius to establish minimum procedural steps for EIS preparation.

Students from Applied Environmental Studies, an advanced Coordinated Studies program, have volunteered their efforts to community, state and local groups and agencies for Spring Quarter. The students, who are under the direction of Faculty Members Oscar Soule, Carolyn Dobbs and Russ Lidman, are seeking projects which will enable them to apply their academic studies to practical, problem-solving in the areas of economics, urban planning and ecology.

The group plans to spend much of Fall Quarter seeking and interviewing potential applicants for the Spring Quarter projects. By January the students will have selected three or four projects and will concentrate on developing the skills necessary to complete them. Spring Quarter they will devote most of their time to the projects and, if need be, some of the students may work on the projects next summer.

SAN FRANCISCO, SEATTLE ARTISTS HERE MONDAY

T. R. UTHCO, a group of San Francisco and Seattle artists, will present a show, "Great Moments" at Evergreen Oct. 14 beginning at 8 p.m. in the main lobby of the Library Building. The presentation, sponsored by Eye-5, will dramatize "the bridge linking formal, visual art with the more innovative discoveries of current avant garde theater," according to Adrienne Alexander, Eye-5 area coordinator.

Nine separate pieces --- covering a wide range of thought, emotion and fantasy --- will be presented in a specific and interrelated sequence, creating a synthesis between prepared media (slide, film, audio and video tapes) and live performances on stage. The performance, according to Alexander, "will have obvious roots in surrealism, minimalism and theater of the absurd."

Members of the group, who have worked together for the past five years, have performed, lectured and conducted workshops extensively across the United States and Canada.
